17 1 Introduction

18 The Dreams of Tipu Sultan uses the concept of dreams to indicate the downfall of Tipu Sultan through his dreams.
19 The dreams book (Khwabnama) was looted from Seringapatam along with other books. The book was not in 20 library or the royal library in Seringapatam. It was discovered hidden in the bed chamber of Tipu Sultan palace
21 Lal Mahal. Tipu sultan stands apart in Karnad's oeuvre because as a play about colonialism it has to grapple 22 with the inescapable psychodrama of east vs. west, Europe vs. the non European other, white vs. non -white,
23 and colonize vs. colonized. Karnad's cast his protagonist in multiple and contradictory roles -as a beloved ruler, 24 legendary warrior, loving father, and visionary dreamer, but also as the Machiavellian schemer who plot with 25 the French against the English, the defeated soldier who enters into humiliating treaties with the enemy. Tipu 26 was the third generation of his family to be born south of the Vindhya. In the play he had four dreams but in 27 history has 37 dreams. His dreams were fulfilled after one hundred and fifty years of his death.

29 3 Dreams

30 Girish karnad's in his play the The Dreams of Tipu Sultan use the concept of dreams to indicate the downfall
31 of Tipu Sultan through his dreams. The dreams of Tipu Sultan can be interpreted as symbol or an indication
32 which focuses on his downfall in the future. The dreams book (Khwab-nama) was looted from Seringapatam
33 along with other books. The book was not in library or the royal library in Seringapatam. It was discovered 34 hidden in the bed chamber of Tipu Sultan palace Lal Mahal the ruin of which can be seen today in front of the 35 Sri Ranganatha Swamy Temple. That nobody saw the book or had an occasion to read it. He kept it so well 36 hidden the even his personal servant and body guard couldn't locate it. What makes this book unique is that 37 it can give us a clear and unambiguous portrait of the man that Tipu was, his inner conflict and his ambition.
38 His dream was recorded in flawless Persian, a tribute to the language skill of the Sultan. Most of the dreams are 39 about his conflicts with British and the volatile political situation of the times. The dreams tell us that Tipu 40 was a human as anyone like us and that the hectic life he lived was reflected in his dreams too. The dreams are 41 inner reflection of his personality and a mirror to his unconscious self. The dreams are his own handwriting and 42 reflect his inner most thought.

3 DREAMS

43 Habibullah, the munshi of Sultan, was present at the time the manuscript was discovered. But he too had only 44 heard of the dreams and never seen it. On April 23 th ,1805 this book was presented in the name of the Marquis
45 Wellesley to Hugh Inglis, Chairman of the Court of Director of the East India Company, by Major Alexander
46 Beatson. A copy of this book is available in the Biblitheque National of Paris which was made for it in 1822.

47 The dreams and other notes in the book were recorded on the first thirty-two pages and again on eleven pages
48 toward the end of it. In between, a large number of pages are left blank. The size of the register is 7 inch by 51
49 inches. The dreams cover thirteen (13) years of his reign-1785-1798.

50 After the death of Tipu Sultan on May 4 th , 1799 his library was taken away to England and now part of 51 the libraries at Cambridge and Oxford, as also the Indian Office Library in London and the Asiatic Society in 52 Calcutta. Most of this dreams devoted to driving the British out of India and defeating the Nizam.

53 Karnad's has mention only four dreams in the play. And all the dreams are political allegories. But in history
54 Tipu had recorded 37 dreams in his dreams book (Khwab-nama) which was found by Colonel Patrlik and this 55 was recorded between the years 1785-1798. Historian Mir Hussian Ali khan Kermani says: T It was dairy in 56 which my master had recorded his dreams. He had kept it concealed from his closest confidants. I didn't know 57 of its existence. None of us did. I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw the word written on its first page, in the 58 Sultan's own hand? Tipu's Voice: In the register are recorded the dreams I've had and an having Kirmani: The 59 Sultan had hidden the diary under his pillow and there it had lain his death? until that idiot Munshi stumbled 60 on it. It was Sacred, personal.

61 When they saw a dairy's as an odd little book a pleasantly inconsequential conversation pieces. This dreams
62 book was presented as an ideal gift for the Chairman of Honourable East India Company in April 1800 on behalf 63 of Marquis Wellesley.

64 In history the dreams themselves, thirty seven in all, date from April 1786 to 16 th January 1799, leading 65 historian to believe that the book was compiled over that entire period. But close analysis of its contents has 66 now revealed that the register is directly connected to the final year of Tipu life and that it dates from no earlier 67 than 1795.

68 Tipu first dream in the play is dream 9 of his dream book in history. His first dream came on the 3 rd day
69 of month of Thamari, the last night of the month of Ramzan followed next morning by IDD in the year of Dalw
70 1213 from the birth of the prophet. He was returning with his army from farrukhi near Salamabad when he had 71 the following dream.

72 Tipu: I had been on an elephant shikar and on my way back was walking with poornaiya, the finance minister,
73 where we saw a big temple. It was in a dilapidated state, and I said, 'poornaiya, look at that structure. It looks 74 quite mysterious. Poornaiya: Yes, your Majesty. It does indeed. Poornaiya: Be careful, sir. Those two. They 75 are getting up look out! (Two woman in the last row stand up. They are wearing nine yard saris. One of them 76 pulls her saris up between her knees). Tipu: Who are you? Are you human or are you some spirits. Woman:
77 Your Majesty. We are living women. The rest of us, theses men here, are merely images. We have been here for 78 many centuries now, praying to God and seeking our salvation. Karnad's, second is come with the first dream.
79 In history second dream was dream 10 out of his 37 dreams. In this Tipu saw two old men with long beards, in 80 flowing silk gowns, approach them. Beside them are two elephants and several footmen carrying spear and guns.
81 Tipu: Greeting? Who are you? You seem to have come from a long distance.

82 Old Man: We are the envoys of the Emperor of China.

83 Tipu: Please enter? what is the object of your visit.

84 Old Man: We wish nothing but the promotion of greater friendship. The Emperor of China send you a white
85 elephant and these horses as a token of his friendship and affection for you. ¹

86 that for you, sir? Here! (unbutton the blouse, Tipu react)? Tipu: (angry) you've tricked me. You've inveigled
 87 the padshah into giving your audience, into talking to you. Get out of here? Out! ? After consulting? Marathas 88 are dressed in male attire, they will in fact prove to be woman.

89 The fourth dream of Tipu came after his two son hostage he was unrest. He couldn't sleep even in the bed
 90 and decided to sleep on the bare stone floor. He had a dream and this dream he sees his father Haider. Haider
 91 said he's maimed and have no limb. He said Tipu cut off his limb and handed them over to the enemy Tipu:
 92 Yes, father. I've done that, have you come to punished me?

93 Haider: What punishment would be adequate, do you think? Further Haider said he have no arms. English 94 are stranger now and you scared of them and think like a trader. But Tipu say he will not let them. He will

96 The last dream in the play is victory over the British. Kirmani remember it vividly. But the crucial detail
 97 still eludes him. Sultan was staying in the caravanserai on the northern ramparts. He'd been there for a couple
 98 of days, with the soldiers, watching the English noose tighten. It was sweltering hot, we had been praying for a
 99 downpour, for them the moats would have been flooded and the English attack delayed. But the cloud had hung 100 ominously, inert, neutral. We were half way through our lunch, our sweat streaming into our plates, when the 101 skies exploded. The English had launched their assault. The Sultan washed his finger and got up. He buckled
 102 on his sword belt, took out an envelope from his pocket, sealed it and gave it to me 'Keep it till I come back,' 103 he said. He mumbled a prayer and left. Kirmani forgot about the letter. Next day he found it in his pocket. He 104 broke the seal and inside was a paper on which he had recorded his last dream. Tipu said:

105 Today we celebrate, we pray and thank God, with the Marathas and the Nizam on our side, we can chase the 106 English into the sea any day. (Laughter) Thank you, all. Together we have driven the English back-. Kirmani:
 107 That was Tipu's last dream.

108 Tipu was killed in 4 th May, 1799. In a fraction of second after identify the sultan dead body wailing of female
 109 is heard in the far distance. The British were surprised how the ladies of the palace known so soon. The palace 110 was a mile away 'Some secret signal'. The wailing gets louder and spread. The entire city was soon wailing. The 111 wailing of ladies washed away the dreams of Sultan. But his last dream was fulfilled after one hundred and fifty 112 years of his death when India got Independence from British.
