

CrossRef DOI of original article:

The Ethical Dilemma of Green Economy: Examining the Human and Environmental Costs of Cobalt Mining in DRC

Sarder Ali Haider¹

¹ Bangladesh University of Professionals

Received: 1 January 1970 Accepted: 1 January 1970 Published: 1 January 1970

Abstract

This article discusses the ethical challenges of the green economy using cobalt mining in the DRC as an example. The rising demand for cobalt, a crucial mineral in the manufacture of renewable energy technologies, has resulted in serious abuses of human rights and environmental damage in the DRC. The article offers suggestions for addressing the ethical and environmental issues linked with cobalt mining in the DRC. These ideas include responsible sourcing policy, interaction with the community, sustainable mining techniques, and support for alternative technologies. The production of essential minerals must prioritize human rights and environmental preservation, and community engagement and sustainable mining techniques can assist in mitigating negative impacts and ensuring equitable distribution of benefits. The shift to a low-carbon economy is crucial to combating climate change, but it must be accomplished in an ethical and sustainable manner. By addressing the ethical and environmental considerations involved with the creation of renewable energy technology, we can ensure that the transition to a low-carbon economy is accomplished in a way that is beneficial to both people and the environment. To build a more just and equitable green economy, it is vital to take a complete and balanced strategy that evaluates the benefits and possible costs of renewable energy technologies.

Index terms— ethical dilemma, green economy, cobalt mining, democratic republic of the congo (DRC), human rights violations he green economy's ethical dilemma is concerned with the potential human and environmental costs connected with the transition to a low-carbon economy (Goldthau A, 2018). The source of minerals used in renewable energy technologies, such as cobalt, which is mostly mined in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), is a critical concern in this respect. The DRC's cobalt mining business has been linked to major human rights violations such as child labor, forced labor, and unsafe working conditions (Amnesty, 2016). Mining firms have been accused of exploiting disadvantaged populations, flouting labor laws, and violating workers' rights. Furthermore, the DRC government's regulatory framework has been insufficient in protecting the rights of local populations and mining workers (Bales, K. 2017).

1 Introduction

The environmental consequences of cobalt mining in the DRC are also considerable. Mining has resulted in deforestation, soil erosion, and water contamination (Musingwini C, 2019). The use of harmful chemicals in the mining process, such as sulfuric acid and cyanide, has also harmed local ecosystems and water sources (Sapp A, 2020). The green economy's ethical dilemma stems from the conflict between the potential benefits of switching to renewable energy technology and the human and environmental costs connected with their production. The growing demand for cobalt, in particular, has put strain on the DRC mining industry, resulting in major human rights violations and environmental deterioration (Kennedy, 2019).

43 The ethical dilemma of the green economy necessitates a comprehensive solution that balances the benefits
44 of renewable energy technologies with human rights and environmental protection. This can be accomplished
45 through responsible sourcing policies that ensure mineral extraction while respecting human rights and the 46 environment (IISD, 2019). It is also critical to collaborate with local communities to ensure their participation
47 in decision-making processes and equitable sharing of benefits (Hilson G, 2018).

48 Responsible sourcing strategies are required to ensure that mining businesses adhere to ethical standards
49 while also respecting human rights and the environment. Certification programs that validate the source and
50 manufacturing processes of minerals used in renewable energy systems may be included in these policies. For 51 example, the Responsible Minerals Initiative (RMI) is a certification program that attempts to enhance the 52 ethical practices in the global mineral supply chain, including cobalt mining in the DRC. The RMI entails
53 auditing, assessing, and verifying mining activities to ensure that they adhere to responsible sourcing criteria.

54 Working with local communities is also important for guaranteeing their participation in decision-making
55 processes and the equal sharing of benefits. Mining corporations should engage with local communities to learn
56 about their needs and concerns, and then collaborate to reduce the negative effects of mining activities. These 57 can include community development programs that promote education, health, and infrastructure, as well as the 58 creation of local supply chains that benefit the communities.

59 The ethical dilemma of the green economy necessitates a balanced strategy that takes into account the human
60 and environmental costs connected with the development of renewable energy technology. The DRC's cobalt
61 mining sector exemplifies the ethical problems of procuring minerals for renewable energy systems. Responsible
62 sourcing regulations and community engagement can help to prevent the negative affects of mining activities
63 and assure the production of renewable energy technologies in an ethical and sustainable manner. This paper
64 investigates the ethical implications of cobalt mining in DRC, with an emphasis on the human and environmental 65 costs involved.

66 2 II. Global Status of Certain Minerals and Fossil Fuels

67 The global status of particular minerals and fossil fuels fluctuates based on their availability, production, and 68 demand. As the globe transitions to a low-carbon economy, demand for minerals such as lithium and cobalt is 69 likely to skyrocket. Yet, ethical and environmental issues about their manufacture underline the importance of 70 responsible sourcing and long-term mining techniques. Here's a quick rundown of the current state of some of 71 the most important minerals and fossil fuels:

72 ? Coal: Coal is still the most abundant fossil fuel on the planet, with worldwide reserves estimated to be more
73 than 1 trillion tons. Yet, due to worries about its contribution to climate change, coal's place in the global energy
74 mix is shrinking. According to the International Energy Agency (IEA), worldwide coal demand is predicted to 75 level and then drop during the next five years (IEA, 2020)).

76 ? Oil: Oil is the most utilized fossil fuel on the planet, with global demand exceeding 99 million barrels per day
77 in 2019. Despite the rise of renewable energy, oil remains a critical source of energy for transportation, heating, 78 and industrial activities.

79 Concerns about climate change and the instability of oil prices, on the other hand, have prompted growing
80 efforts to convert to alternate energy sources (IEA, 2020).

81 ? Natural Gas: Natural gas is the fastest-growing fossil fuel, with demand expected to expand at a 1.6%
82 annual rate through 2040. Natural gas is a cleanerburning fuel than coal or oil and is frequently utilized as 83 a transition fuel to renewable energy. Concerns regarding methane emissions from natural gas production and 84 transportation, on the other hand, have sparked worries about its environmental impact (IEA, 2020).

85 ? Lithium: Lithium is a crucial mineral used in the creation of batteries for electric vehicles and renewable
86 energy storage systems. As the globe transforms to a low-carbon economy, global demand for lithium is expected
87 to high. Yet, lithium manufacturing has been linked to environmental consequences such as water contamination
88 and habitat destruction. (IEA, 2019).

89 ? Cobalt: Cobalt is another important mineral that is utilized in the manufacture of batteries for electric
90 vehicles and renewable energy storage systems. Almost 70% of the world's cobalt comes from DRC, where 91 human rights violations and environmental problems have created ethical issues regarding its production (IEA, 92 2019).

93 ? Rare Earth Elements (REEs): REEs are a category of minerals that are vital for the creation of high-tech
94 items such as cellphones, wind turbines, and electric vehicles. China now controls the majority of the worldwide
95 supply of REEs, raising worries about supply chain security and escalating geopolitical tensions (US Geological 96 Survey, 2021). Cobalt demand is increasing as the globe strives for a "greener" economy, with Electric vehicles
97 (EVs) replacing traditional gasoline/diesel vehicles, solar and wind energy being stored in massive batteries, and
98 the manufacture of smartphones and laptop computers. EVs are regarded as a promising means of reducing
99 greenhouse gas emissions and combating climate change (Gopalakrishnan, 2021). But, rising demand for battery
100 minerals, particularly cobalt, a vital component of electric vehicle batteries, has resulted in an increase in demand
101 (The Economist, 2019) According to the International Energy Agency's (IEA) research, "The Role of Key Minerals 102 in Clean Energy Transitions," demand for minerals such as lithium, cobalt, and rare earth elements (REEs) is 103 likely to rise dramatically as the world transitions to a lowcarbon economy. According to the paper, demand for 104 lithium and cobalt might increase by 40 and 25 times, respectively, by 2040 to fulfill the needs of electric vehicle

105 and renewable energy storage system production (IEA, 2019). Similarly, demand for REEs is expected to climb
106 by more than 300% by 2040, owing to the increased use of high-tech items such as smartphones, wind turbines,
107 and electric vehicles.

108 These forecasts imply that the shift to a lowcarbon economy will necessitate a large increase in the production
109 of essential minerals. However, this increase must be complemented with responsible sourcing and sustainable 110 mining procedures in order to avoid ethical and environmental concerns related with their manufacturing.

111 3 Literature Review

112 The transition to a green economy has emerged as a global priority for tackling the climate change challenge.
113 Renewable energy technologies have the ability to reduce carbon emissions and alleviate climate change effects.
114 Unfortunately, the extraction of essential minerals is required for the development of these technologies, which 115 may have ethical and environmental concerns. The following literature review investigates the ethical issues
116 related with the development of renewable energy technology, as well as the necessity for responsible sourcing
117 rules.

118 Critical mineral production, such as cobalt, lithium, and rare earth elements, has been connected to human 119 rights violations and environmental deterioration in poor countries (IEA, 2020). One such example is the 120 Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), where cobalt mining has been linked to child labor and hazardous
121 working conditions (Amnesty International, 2016). To promote a more just and equitable green economy, the 122 development of renewable energy technology must prioritize human rights and environmental conservation.

123 Responsible sourcing regulations are required to ensure the ethical production of key minerals utilized in 124 renewable energy systems. Implementing responsible sourcing standards may include certification programs that 125 validate the origin and manufacturing methods of minerals. The Responsible Minerals Initiative (RMI) is an 126 industry-led project that strives to create a responsible minerals supply chain that respects human rights and 127 the environment (RMI, 2020).

128 Community engagement and sustainable mining methods can also play an important role in reducing negative
129 effects and ensuring equitable benefit distribution. Mining corporations should engage with local communities to 130 learn about their needs and concerns, and then collaborate to remedy the negative effects of mining activities.
131 Therefore, sustainable mining procedures that promote environmental preservation and minimize negative
132 consequences are essential (ICMM, 2018).

133 The survey of literature emphasizes the ethical problems connected with the development of renewable energy
134 technology, as well as the necessity for responsible sourcing rules. Implementing responsible sourcing policies and 135 sustainable mining methods, as well as community engagement, can help reduce the negative impacts of vital
136 minerals extraction and ensure a more just and equitable green economy.

137 4 IV.

138 5 Methodology

139 This article is a qualitative study of the ethical dilemma of the green economy and the human and environmental 140 costs of cobalt mining in the DRC. The research is based on secondary sources, such as academic publications,
141 international organization papers, and news stories. The literature review investigates the ethical difficulties
142 posed by the manufacture of renewable energy technology and the need for responsible sourcing rules. The 143 examination then concentrates on the issue of cobalt mining in the DRC and the attendant abuses of human 144 rights and environmental damage.

145 The research is based on a comprehensive literature assessment and includes results from multiple sources
146 to present a thorough and nuanced analysis of the ethical difficulties involved with the manufacturing of 147 renewable energy technology. The focus of the literature review is on scholarly works, reports from international 148 organizations, and news pieces that examine the ethical difficulties involved with the creation of renewable 149 energy technology and the need for responsible sourcing rules. The study of the cobalt mining issue in the DRC
150 is based on news stories and studies from international organizations that show the human rights violations and 151 environmental devastation linked with cobalt mining.

152 The research is constrained by the lack of data on cobalt mining in the DRC, a difficult area for data collecting
153 owing to political instability and poor governance. Notwithstanding this, the paper presents a complete review
154 of the ethical problems involved with the manufacture of renewable energy technology and the necessity of 155 responsible sourcing regulations.

156 Using cobalt mining in the DRC as a case study, this qualitative study provides a complete review of the 157 ethical problems connected with the manufacturing of renewable energy technology. The analysis emphasizes the 158 need for responsible sourcing rules, community participation, sustainable mining methods, and the promotion of 159 alternative technologies in order to mitigate the negative effects of essential mineral production and promote a 160 more just and equitable green economy.

161 V.

6 Discussion

The Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) is a major cobalt producer, accounting for roughly 70% of global cobalt production (USGS, 2021). However, cobalt mining in the Democratic Republic of the Congo is related with a number of ethical difficulties, including worker exploitation and environmental destruction. The increasing adoption of EVs by consumers and policymakers alike can be ascribed to the rising demand for cobalt. As countries strive to reach their carbon reduction targets and phase out fossil-fuel-powered vehicles, the market for electric vehicles is expected to grow quickly in the coming years (Gopalakrishnan, 2021). Nevertheless, the production of EVs necessitates the usage of a substantial amount of cobalt, which is primarily mined in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

The use of cobalt in EVs has prompted issues about the ethics of the supply chain, particularly in connection to the human and environmental costs of mining in the DRC. The majority of cobalt mining in the DRC is done by artisanal and small-scale miners who operate in dangerous conditions for little pay (Amponsah-Dacosta & Akuffo, 2019). Furthermore, the mining process has caused severe environmental deterioration, such as deforestation and soil erosion, affecting the livelihoods of local residents (Amponsah-Dacosta & Akuffo, 2019).

Cobalt mining in the Democratic Republic of the Congo is primarily carried out by artisanal and smallscale miners who labor in exceedingly hazardous conditions. The mining technique entails excavating tunnels by hand, using primitive tools, and working in small places. Toxic particles in mining dust can cause lung disease, cancer, and other respiratory disorders. The miners, many of whom are children, work long hours in hazardous and unhealthy conditions with inadequate protective equipment (Amponsah-Dacosta & Akuffo, 2019).

The working conditions of miners in the DRC have been described as among the worst in the world (Amponsah-Dacosta & Akuffo, 2019). According to an Amnesty International (2016) investigation, children as young as seven years old work in cobalt mines in the DRC, where working conditions are "hazardous, unclean, and physically demanding." The research also underscores the fact that miners in the DRC are paid very little, with some earning as little as $2 per day (Amnesty International, 2016).

In addition to the health dangers involved with cobalt mining in the DRC, the mining process has resulted in severe environmental deterioration. The mining process consumes a large quantity of water and energy, depleting natural resources and worsening the region's already vulnerable ecosystem. The mining process has led in deforestation, soil erosion, and waterway contamination, affecting the livelihoods of local residents (Amponsah-Dacosta & Akuffo, 2019).

The lack of transparency in the cobalt supply chain has made it impossible to trace the source of cobalt used in the fabrication of electric car batteries. This has made it difficult to ensure that the cobalt used in EV batteries is not linked to human rights violations and environmental destruction (Apple, 2020).

7 VI.

8 Analysis and Findings

The analysis of the green economy's ethical dilemma, especially in terms of cobalt mining in the DRC, shows how important it is to have responsible sourcing policies and sustainable mining practices to make sure that important minerals used in renewable energy technologies are mined in an ethical way. Here are the most important things that came out of the analysis:

? Human Rights Violations: Human rights violations in developing countries have been linked to the mining of important minerals like cobalt. Cobalt mining in the DRC is an example of this. There have been reports of child labor and dangerous working conditions there. Putting in place responsible sourcing policies can help stop these violations of human rights and make sure that critical minerals are made in a fair way.

? Degradation of the environment: The mining of important minerals can also hurt the environment. In the case of cobalt mining in the DRC, the lack of rules and enforcement has made it possible for mining companies to ignore environmental rules, which has polluted the soil and water. It is important to use mining methods that are good for the environment and have as few negative effects as possible.

? Involving the community: Involving the community is important to make sure that benefits are shared fairly and that problems caused by mining are fixed.

Mining companies should talk to people in the area to find out what they need and what worries them. They should also work together to solve problems caused by mining.

? Policies for Responsible Sourcing: Policies for responsible sourcing are needed to make sure that critical minerals used in renewable energy technologies are produced in an ethical way.

Responsible sourcing policies can be put into place with the help of certification programs that check where minerals come from and how they are made. The Responsible Minerals Initiative (RMI) is an industry-led effort to set up a responsible minerals supply chain that protects human rights and the environment.

? Alternative Technologies: Supporting alternative technologies, like solid-state batteries that use less cobalt, can help lower the demand for critical minerals and reduce the negative effects of making them.

The analysis of the green economy's ethical dilemma, especially in terms of cobalt mining in the DRC, shows how important it is to have responsible sourcing policies, sustainable mining practices, community involvement, and support for alternative technologies to make sure that important minerals used in renewable energy technologies are produced in an ethical way. To make sure that the change to a lowcarbon economy is

223 good for both people and the planet, the production of renewable energy technologies must address ethical and 224 environmental concerns.

225 9 VII.

226 10 Recommendations

227 The ethical problem posed by the green economy necessitates a multifaceted strategy that strikes a balance
228 between the advantages of renewable energy technology and the protection of human rights and the environment.
229 The following recommendations are presented to resolve the ethical concerns related to cobalt mining in the 230 DRC: ? Encouraging Other Technologies: The expansion of the renewable energy industry must be followed by 231 innovations in alternative technologies, such as solid-state batteries, that minimize reliance on cobalt and other 232 essential minerals (Gao, Y., & Chen, G. 2021).

233 The ethical issue of the green economy necessitates an all-encompassing strategy that balances the advantages
234 of renewable energy technology with the protection of human rights and the environment. The aforementioned
235 ideas can play a vital role in guaranteeing the ethical and sustainable production of important minerals utilized
236 in renewable energy systems.

237 11 VIII.

238 12 Conclusion

239 The ethical issue of the green economy necessitates a comprehensive and balanced strategy that takes into 240 account the possible advantages and costs of renewable energy technology. Frequently, the production of these 241 technologies requires the extraction of key minerals, which may have ethical and environmental consequences.
242 As such, cobalt mining in the Democratic Republic of the Congo serves as an illustration of the ethical issues
243 brought by the green economy.

244 Demand for cobalt, a critical mineral in the development of renewable energy technology such as electric
245 vehicles and solar panels, has led to serious abuses of human rights and environmental degradation in the 246 Democratic Republic of the Congo. Lack of regulation and enforcement has permitted mining corporations
247 to exploit vulnerable communities and disrespect environmental standards. The production of essential minerals
248 necessitates sourcing rules that place human rights and environmental conservation first. Nevertheless, community
249 engagement and sustainable mining techniques can offset negative effects and guarantee equitable sharing of 250 benefits. This article's ideas, which include responsible sourcing rules, community participation, sustainable 251 mining methods, and support for alternative technologies, present a road map for establishing a more sustainable 252 and ethical green economy. To ensure that the transition to a low-carbon economy benefits both people and the 253 earth, it is crucial to address ethical and environmental concerns linked with the creation of renewable energy
254 technology.

255 The ethical conundrum presented by the green economy highlights the need for a balanced approach to 256 sustainable development. This article's ideas can serve as a starting point for mining firms, governments, and 257 communities to work jointly to guarantee that the transition to a low-carbon economy is ethical and sustainable.
258 By prioritizing human rights and environmental conservation, we may establish a green economy that is more
259 just and equitable, to the benefit of both present and future generations. ¹

¹The Ethical Dilemma of Green Economy: Examining the Human and Environmental Costs of Cobalt Mining in DRC

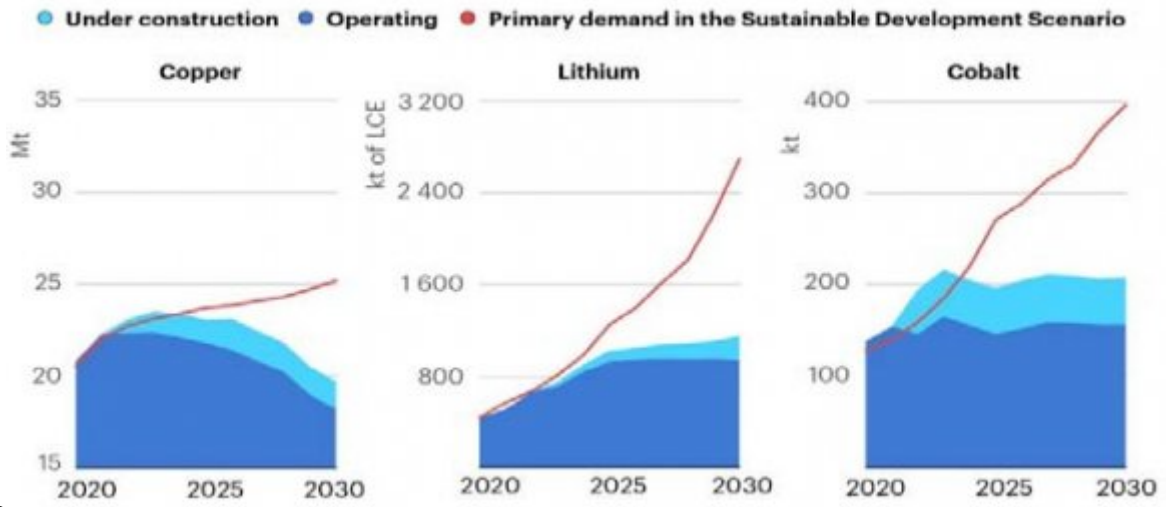

1

Figure 1: Figure 1 :

2

Figure 2: Figure 2 :

3

Figure 3: Figure 3 :

4

Figure 4: Figure 4 :

- 260 [International Energy Agency (I)] , International Energy Agency 2020. International Energy Agency
- 261 [Alliance for Responsible Mining (ARM)] Alliance for Responsible Mining, <https://www.responsiblemines.org/en/what-we-do/> 2021. (What we do)
- 262
- 263 [Apple (A)] Apple commits to 100% carbon neutrality for supply chain and
- 264 products by 2030, Apple . https://www.apple.com/newsroom/2020/07/
- 265 apple-commits-to-100-carbon-neutrality-for-supply-chain-and-products-by-2030/
- 266 2020.
- 267 [Hilson (H)] ‘Artisanal and small-scale mining and rural development in sub-Saharan Africa: A review of the
- 268 literature’. G Hilson . African Journal of Economic and Management Studies 2018. 9 (2) p. .
- 269 [Bales (B)] ‘Blood, sweat, and batteries: Human rights and the electronics industry’. K Bales . Emerging issues
- 270 in sustainable development: International trade law and policy relating to natural resources, energy, and the
- 271 environment, A H J J Rainer & S, Kim (ed.) (Cham, Switzerland) 2017. Springer International Publishing.
- 272 p. .
- 273 [Cobalt action partnership Responsible Sourcing Network (CASP)] ‘Cobalt action partnership’. <https://www.sourcingnetwork.org/cobalt-action-partnership> Responsible Sourcing Network 2021.
- 274
- 275 [Bmw Group (B)] ‘Cobalt for Development” to support sustainable mining practices in the Democratic Republic of
- 276 Congo’. Bmw Group . https://www.press.bmwgroup.com/global/article/detail/T0291663EN/
- 277 bmw-group-basf-samsung-sdi-and-samsung-electronics-launch-cobalt-for-development-to-support-sustainable-mining-practices-in-the-democratic-republic-of-congo?language=en BMW Group, BASF, Samsung SDI and Samsung Electronics launch, 2019.
- 278
- 279 [Usgs (U)] Cobalt statistics and information, Usgs . https://www.usgs.gov/centers/nmic/
- 280 cobalt-statistics-and-information 2021.
- 281 [Conflict minerals regulation (C)] Conflict minerals regulation, https://ec.europa.eu/trade/policy/
- 282 in-focus/conflict-minerals-regulation/ 2021.
- 283 [Congo’s cobalt blues The Economist (E)] ‘Congo’s cobalt blues’. https://www.economist.com/
- 284 middle-east-and-africa/2019/03/07/congos-cobalt-blues The Economist 2019.
- 285 [Goldthau et al. (G)] ‘Crafting an energy transition: Lessons learned from contemporary and historical case
- 286 studies’. A Goldthau , B K Sovacool , L E Roach . Energy Research & Social Science 2018. 46 p. .
- 287 [Kuehr and Lüpschen (K)] Critical raw materials for strategic technologies and sectors in the EU: A foresight study,
- 288 R Kuehr , C Lüpschen . 2017. Luxembourg: Publications Office of the European Union.
- 289 [DR Congo approves new mining code despite companies’ opposition (D)] DR Congo approves new mining code
- 290 despite companies’ opposition, <https://www.bbc.com/news/world-africa-42723524> 2018.
- 291 [Gopalakrishnan (G)] ‘Electric vehicles: A global reality check’. M Gopalakrishnan . <https://www.weforum.org/agenda/2021/02/electric-vehicles-ev-adoption-global-reality-check/> World Eco-
- 292 nomical Forum 2021.
- 293
- 294 [Sapp et al. (S)] ‘Environmental impacts of mining in the Democratic Republic of Congo’. A M Sapp , M A Wilson
- 295 , R A Hill . Applied Geography 2020. p. 102232.
- 296 [Gas 2020 International Energy Agency (I)] ‘Gas 2020’. International Energy Agency 2020. International Energy
- 297 Agency
- 298 [Kennedy and Xu (K)] ‘Human rights and ethical concerns in the supply chain for cobalt’. L Kennedy , S Xu .
- 299 Energy Policy 2019. 134 p. 110972.
- 300 [m-the-role-of-mining-in-the-transition-to-a-low-carb on-economy-2018.pdf 15 International Council on Mining and Metals (I)]
- 301 ‘m-the-role-of-mining-in-the-transition-to-a-low-carb on-economy-2018.pdf 15’. https://www.icmm.com/
- 302 -/media/documents/icmm-reports/2018/icm International Council on Mining and Metals 2018.
- 303 2020. (International Energy Agency.. Coal 2020. Paris: International Energy Agency)
- 304 [National commission for mines (N)] National commission for mines, https://www.mines.gouv.cd/2018/
- 305 07/26/la-commission-nationale-des-mines/ 2018.
- 306 [Position Statement on Mining and Human Rights International Council on Mining and Metals (I)] ‘Position
- 307 Statement on Mining and Human Rights’. https://www.icmm.com/en-gb/policy-and-positions/
- 308 position-statements/mining-and-human-rights International Council on Mining and Metals
- 309 2021.
- 310 [Rare Earths Statistics and Information United States Geological Survey (U)] ‘Rare Earths Statistics and Infor-
- 311 mation’. United States Geological Survey 2021. (United States Geological Survey)
- 312 [Responsible sourcing of minerals: What can the Democratic Republic of Congo learn from other mineral-rich countries (I)]
- 313 Responsible sourcing of minerals: What can the Democratic Republic of Congo learn from other mineral-rich
- 314 countries, 2019. Geneva, Switzerland. (International Institute for Sustainable Development. International
- 315 Institute for Sustainable Development)

12 CONCLUSION

316 [Sustainable Development Goals ()] Sustainable Development Goals, https://www.un.org/
317 sustainabledevelopment/sustainable-development-goals/ 2021. (United Nations)

318 [Tesla cobalt sourcing policy ()] Tesla cobalt sourcing policy, https://bettercobalt.org/
319 about-the-project/ 2020. 2021. (The Better Cobalt Project.) (About the project)

320 [Amponsah-Dacosta and Akuffo ()] ‘The ethical dimensions of electric vehicle adoption in Republic of Congo’. E
321 Amponsah-Dacosta , F O Akuffo . Journal of Cleaner Production 2019. 237 p. 117828.

322 [Musingwini ()] ‘The impact of cobalt mining in the Democratic Republic of Congo’. C Musingwini . South
323 African Journal of International Affairs 2019. 26 (3) p. .

324 [The Role of Critical Minerals in Clean Energy Transitions International Energy Agency ()] ‘The Role of Criti-
325 cal Minerals in Clean Energy Transitions’. International Energy Agency 2019. International Energy Agency

326 [This is what we die for: Human rights abuses in the Democratic Republic of the Congo power the global trade in cobalt Amnesty
327 ‘This is what we die for: Human rights abuses in the Democratic Republic of the Congo power the global
328 trade in cobalt’. <https://www.amnesty.org/download/Documents/AFR6231832016ENGLISH.PDF>
329 Amnesty International 2016.